

Pink! Sharing game

Pink! is the story of one little penguin who feels different from his friends. He worries that he won't fit in, and that the other penguins will tease him. Everyone feels a bit different sometimes. Life would be boring if we were all the same!

Find a partner for this game. On a blank piece of paper, draw a line right down the middle to divide it in half. Each person writes their name at the top of the paper, one on each half.

Now, think about all the ways you and your partner are DIFFERENT. That might be things like:

- the colour of your eyes and hair
- whether you're a boy or girl
- the languages you can speak
- your favourite food
- the things you like to do
- whether you are quiet or noisy
- which hand you write with
- who is in your family

Under your name, write all the things you can think of that are different from your partner. Is it a long list? Are they important things?

Next, turn the paper over. This time put both your names at the top with no line down the middle. On this page, take turns writing down all the ways you are the SAME. Maybe you can make this list even longer! Work together to think of as many things as you can that you have in common.
